I. Course Overview

“When I finally got a management position, I found out how hard it is to lead and manage people. The quantitative stuff is easy — you either don’t do much of this as a manager or you have people working for you to do it.... The warm, fuzzy stuff is hard. I should have taken organizational behavior and social psychology — and maybe abnormal psychology, come to think of it.”

—Guy Kawasaki, in an interview with NYT columnist Adam Bryant (March 20, 2010)

While proficiency in finance, accounting, marketing, operations, and strategy are crucial ingredients for organizational success, the ability to effectively lead and manage oneself, others, and groups of people in organizations is essential. Leadership is both an art and a science. It is a way of thinking and behaving, as well as a set of skills that can be developed and honed throughout a lifetime. Whether you’re already an experienced manager or aspire to become one, this course is designed to give you the tools you need to be more effective in leading teams and organizations.
Course Objectives:

- Enhance your leadership and management potential by developing your authentic leadership and understanding of your own strengths and weaknesses as a leader and manager.
  - We'll accomplish this through personal reflection and discussion of how course concepts apply to your own experiences and outlook.

- Develop your ability to analyze issues pertaining to leading and managing individuals, teams, and organizations.
  - We'll accomplish this by learning about evidence-based frameworks on the behavior of people and teams and applying this knowledge to real situations in the workplace.

- Expand your leadership and management skillset by learning behavioral strategies to address real-world problems faced by managers.
  - We'll accomplish this through simulations and experiential challenges that practice class insights.

II. Instructional Content & Course Schedule

To meet these objectives, this course uses readings, reflections, lectures, exercises & simulations, cases, and small group discussion. Readings, reflections, and other pre-class assignments provide an important foundation for class discussion and self-development. Lectures highlight key points from the readings and provide additional information to supplement the readings. Exercises, cases, and simulations provide the opportunity to experience and apply course concepts to real world issues and scenarios. Participation in class discussions and activities is essential to your own learning as well as that of other class members.

The content of this course is organized around “spheres of influence” that work from the inside out (i.e., individual, interpersonal, and organizational). According to this framework, we will progress through the following five modules: authentic leadership, motivation, decision-making, teams, and organizational culture and change. Each module reflects a different way of leading yourself and others.

A. Reflection Assignments (30%)

Reflections #1-4 ask you to reflect on a series of leadership questions, put your thoughts and experiences into writing, and then share them with your LTO reflection group for feedback and inspiration. Your LTO reflection group is NOT your winter quarter learning team, though some members may overlap between the two groups. The purpose of these reflections is to build a foundation for leadership by understanding and harnessing the unique leadership potential of each participant, as well as finding their authentic leadership. The highly introspective nature of these reflections require 1.5-2 hours to complete and historically have been cited by students as highly impactful for their leadership development, so please give them the time and attention they deserve.

Reflections #5-8 ask you to reflect on your experiences as they relate to the topics of motivation, decision-making, teams, and organizational culture & change. In addition to reflecting on your experiences, you must refer to at least one of the required or recommended readings in a given module and use key insights from the reading(s) in the following ways: You might describe how an insight from the reading gave you a new perspective on a phenomena in your past experience that was originally confusing. Or you could use an insight to reflect on your own strengths and opportunities for development as a leader and manager. Or you could explain how an insight could have improved the way things were done at work. Or all of the above. Whatever approach you take, the purpose of these reflections is to help you analyze issues pertaining to leading and managing individuals, teams, and organizations based on your prior experiences, as well as enhance your leadership and management potential by enhancing awareness of your own strengths and weaknesses as a leader and manager.

Evaluation criteria: All reflections are to be uploaded to Canvas before 8:45 a.m. on the day they are due. Reflections are generally expected to range between 500-700 words (approximately 1 page single-spaced). Late submissions are not accepted and will receive a zero.

Note: All reflections will be shared in class with your LTO reflection group. This opportunity to share about your personal experiences and leadership and managerial journey with a small group of your peers is an essential part of the learning process and has been cited by students as some of their most inspiring and meaningful interactions with classmates in the MBA.

B. Module Exams (40%).

This course features four module exams in the areas of motivation, decision-making, teams, and organizational culture and change, respectively. Each exam features a mini-case involving a short leadership and management scenario and asks you to “solve” the scenario through the lens of course content. All four module exams will be administered online, will be open for at least 44 hours, and has a 45 minute time limit for completion once started. This is an individual effort – no group work allowed. My expectation is that you will write 3-4 paragraphs in response to each exam question. Your answers will be evaluated in terms of (a) the depth of your analysis in connecting class concepts to the case, (b) the robustness of your recommendations and implementation plans based on your analysis, and (c) the professionalism of the document, including the quality of your writing, organization of text, spelling, and punctuation. Late submissions will be marked down 1% for each minute they are late. There are no make-up exams if the exam window is missed.
C. In-class Participation (20%).

This class relies heavily on discussion and participation by students. Attendance and insightful participation are critical for indicating student mastery of the material and are expected of all graduate students and professionals. Your in-class participation grade will be assessed twice—once at the midterm and once at the end of the course. As such, although you are expected to participate fully in the exercises in each class session, you need not speak up every time we meet. Your in-class participation grade will be graded on a scale from 0 (lowest) through 4 (highest), using the criteria below. I expect the average level of participation to satisfy the criteria for a “3”.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Grade</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>0</td>
<td>Absent.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| 1     | Present, not disruptive.
|       | Demonstrates very infrequent involvement in discussion. |
| 2     | Offers straightforward information (e.g., straight from the case or reading), but does not show evidence of trying to interpret or analyze them.
|       | Contributes to discussion a moderate degree when called on.
|       | Demonstrates sporadic involvement. |
| 3     | Offers interpretations and analysis of case material (more than just facts) to class.
|       | Contributes to discussion in an ongoing way: responds to other students' points, thinks through own points, questions others in a constructive way, offers and supports suggestions that may be counter to the majority opinion.
|       | Demonstrates consistent ongoing involvement. |
| 4     | Offers analysis, synthesis, and evaluation of case material, e.g., puts together pieces of the discussion to develop new approaches that take the class further; links material to readings, course content, other discussions, experiences, etc.
|       | Contributes in a very significant way to ongoing discussion: keeps analysis focused, responds very thoughtfully to other students' comments, contributes to the cooperative argument-building, suggests alternative ways of approaching material and helps class analyze which approaches are appropriate, etc.
|       | Demonstrates very active ongoing involvement. |

Most participation opportunities will come through random call. I do this to ensure I hear from everyone in an equitable manner. However, some participation opportunities will also occur in a less structured manner. In such cases, you are welcome to raise your hand and participate as you see fit.

D. Pre-class Assignments (10%).

There are a total of four pre-class assignments where you are expected to complete some sort of activity in advance of class that lays a foundation for an activity we will be doing for class. The pre-class assignments are: personal video introduction, judgment in a crisis simulation, and Big 5 personality test. Some of these assignments take less than 10 minutes to complete. Others take an hour or more. All pre-assignments are due before 8:45 a.m. on the day they are due. Late submissions are not accepted and will receive a zero.

IV. Administrivia

A. Grading Policy.

In business, employees who do what is expected of them are generally considered to be average performers. Those who do what is expected of them but do it excellently are good performers. But those who go above and beyond what is expected of them and do it excellently are stars. Please do not expect star grades for what is average or even good work.

If you wish to dispute a grade on an exam or assignment, please return the assignment in question to me along with a written one-page statement describing your dispute within one week. Indicate specific questions/items which you would like me to consider, and back up your claims with specific notes, page numbers, cites, etc. Note that I reserve the right to adjust your grade in either direction based on my reanalysis of your assignment.

As with all core courses, this course is graded on a curve. The approximate median grade for this course will be 3.4. Historically, students do very well in this course, with a class median of around 96%. Therefore, typically, to receive a grade above 3.4, you will need to achieve a grade percentage that is above that.

B. Class Attendance.

Class attendance with your scheduled section is critical to participation in the learning experience. In accordance with Foster MBA Program policy, attendance is required aside from circumstances related to (1) illness or (2) unavoidable conflict with a final job or internship interview that cannot be rescheduled. Regardless of the rationale for missing a class meeting, please note that you are responsible for (a) notifying me by email, (b) notifying your LTO reflection group/winter quarter learning team, and (c) making up the content or learning experience that takes place in your absence. Please work within your LTO reflection group and winter quarter learning team to address any material you may have missed, and please contact me afterwards should you have lingering questions or concerns about course content. Note that I reserve the right to adjust your in-class participation grade in either direction based on the rationale given for your absence.

C. Technology, Professionalism, and the Classroom.

Each student is expected to be on time to and prepared for each class meeting as well as fully engaged in class content throughout the class meeting. Should our class move to a virtual format, Zoom professionalism includes: video on, microphone on mute (unless speaking), chat is content-related. In addition, research shows that being online (surfing the Web, checking email, texting, etc.) inhibits your ability to learn. So regardless of whether we are in-person or virtual, please close any applications (including email) that are not class-related and refrain from engaging in any activities that might distract from your and others’ learning experience.

D. The Honor Code.

I employ the principles and procedures espoused by the Foster School of Business MBA Honor System to maintain academic integrity in the course. The Honor Code of the Foster School expressly prohibits cheating, attempted cheating, plagiarism, and lying to administration or faculty as it pertains to academic work. Suspected violations of the Honor Code will be handled by referral of the matter to the Foster MBA Honor Council.

I expect that you will complete all deliverables required in the course in accordance with the principles of the Honor Code and submit them by the due dates assigned. Upholding the Honor Code means not plagiarizing case write ups or research sources for your team project, but instead finding creative ways to rephrase insights from secondary resources and giving credit wherever possible. Upholding the Honor Code also means not talking to others about the nature of the team challenges or seeking out “solutions” online prior to completing the challenges. If you have any uncertainty about how the Honor Code applies to a specific deliverable in this course, please ask before taking action; when it is not possible to ask before acting, please err on the side of conservatism.

E. Disability Resources.

If you have special needs due to a physical, emotional, or learning disability, contact me by the end of the first week of class. I will accommodate students’ special needs to the best of my ability, but please notify me in advance. Students with disabilities should contact Disabled Student Services to develop reasonable accommodations. For an appointment with a counselor, call 543-8924 (voice) or 543-8925 (TTY), or e-mail uwdss@u.washington.edu.

F. Religious Accommodation.

Washington state law requires that UW develop a policy for accommodation of student absences or significant hardship due to reasons of faith or conscience, or for organized religious activities. The UW’s policy, including more information about how to request an accommodation, is available at Faculty Syllabus Guidelines and Resources. Accommodations must be requested within the first two weeks of this course using the Religious Accommodations Request form available at: https://registrar.washington.edu/students/religious-accommodations-request/
