

INTERRUPTING PRIVILEGE BLACK CAPITALISM | SPRING COURSE

Interrupting Privilege - Black Capitalism:

The concept of Racial Capitalism has its beginnings at the intersection of Black Radical Thought and Marxism. Cedric Robinson and his 1983 book, Black Marxism, are often credited as its starting point, though as Robinson himself notes in the book, the discussion has earlier origins, including in the writings of Oliver Cox, WEB Dubois, C.L.R James and others. This seminar engages questions of racial capitalism through writing, discussions, activities, and film. Students – in partnership with UW alums – will meet to read and discuss the scholarship and engagement of Cedric Robinson's work.

Course Information:

Course Name & Number: BCMU 579/490 E/F - COMM
495: BLACK CAPITALISM IN THE IN THE 21ST CENTURY

Quarter: SPRING 2024

Start & End Dates: 03/25/2024 – 06/7/2024

Time/Day: T/Th 3:30PM-5:20PM

Delivery Format: In Person

FOSTER
SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON